Health Department Bulletin Shows that Twelve Persons Died from Malady Last Week.

The epidemic of grip that is sweeping the country has not relinquished its hold on Washington, the weekly bulletin of the health department showing twelve deaths from the disease last week. This makes a total of thirty-four deaths from grip since January 1. The health depart-ment points to the danger of contracting pneumonia from grip, and urges imme-diate treatment of the disease.

"Epidemic influenza, which is the same as grip, is a highly communicable dis-ease, particularly during its early stages," reads the health department's statement. "The specific bacillus spreads from person to person, and is especially dangerous in crowded street cars and other places of assemblage, such as these other places of assemblage, such as thea other places of assemblage, such as thea-ters and moving-picture shows. It usu-ally is transmitted either by direct con-tact, or, not infrequently, through the common use of towels, drinking cups and handkerchiefs which have been contaminated by secretions,"
